Keyot builds transformative programs for Agile adoption

Embracing Agile can be a very daunting task. It doesn't happen overnight and if done too hastily, it can be counter-productive and full of risk. Agile practices are best learned through experience and not something that you can easily apply after reading a book or article.

We work with some of the best and most sought-after Agile Coaches and project leaders around the country to create an Agile framework that best fits the needs of our clients. No two organizations are alike, so we take the time to learn our clients' current business practices, processes, and culture to come up with a plan that leverages the experienced technology and business teams already in place.

We have used many different training and coaching techniques to best take advantage of the different competencies and structures of the organizations that we partner with. In all cases, we promote an Agile framework that is easy to learn, adopt, and continuously implement – even after our Coaches have left.
